CUSTER CONNECTIONS

Women's History Month is a fantastic opportunity for you to recognize the invaluable contributions of women, past and present. It's not just about historical figures; it's about celebrating the women who drive your business, your community, and the world forward.

And let's face it, it's a great reminder to put some good cheer into the world. After all, people love feel-good narratives. While it may be difficult to implement these ideas before the end of the month, you can always use them to plan for next year or make an announcement this month to unveil a larger plan rollout for another time.

Here are some creative ways to celebrate, internally and externally, at your business:

Internal Employee Celebrations: Fostering Appreciation and Growth

Like Mother's Day, you don't have to be a woman to celebrate the accomplishments and contributions of women. Make it enjoyable and welcoming for all.

Here are a few ways to encourage support for, and interest in, Women's History Month:

Create a Women Who Inspire Spotlight

Dedicate a segment of your internal newsletter or intranet to spotlighting female employees, customers, or figures who inspire your team. Share their stories, achievements, and insights. But that's just the beginning. Get your crew involved too. Create a "wall of inspiration" in your breakroom or office (or even your front lobby or register stand), where employees can post pictures and stories of women who inspire them.

Host Skill-Sharing Workshops or Lunch & Learns

Invite female employees to lead workshops on their areas of expertise. This empowers them and provides valuable learning opportunities for the team. For instance, your marketing maven could give a workshop on personal branding. Organize a lunch & learn session featuring a female speaker from your industry or community. This could be a mentor, a successful entrepreneur, or an expert in a relevant field. Not only is this inspiring but could lead employees to see their career path in a new way.

Launch a Mentorship Program

Launch or promote existing mentorship programs that connect female employees with experienced mentors, either within or outside the company. Create a networking event specifically for the women in your company. If you have a smaller business where that is difficult to do, work with local groups like your chamber to create opportunities for networking, mentorships, and leadership development.

Create a Parent friendly Job Program

Create a Parent-Friendly Job Program

One of the hardest parts of keeping women in the workforce is childcare. While your business may not have the budget to offer employees childcare or a subsidy to offset the cost, you may be able to offer alternative shifts that make parenting and work possible. For instance, you could offer a 9-3 shift to accommodate parents who have to pick up children from school or you could arrange job shares that would allow two part-time employees to share one full-time position. This would ensure the needs of the parents and the business are both met.

External Celebrations: Engaging Your Community and Customers

Women's History Month has become increasingly popular over the past few years. Many businesses are hosting events and other celebrations. Here are a few ideas of how you can do the same:

Host a Female Author or Speaker

Partner with a local bookstore or library to host a book signing or speaking event featuring a female author or thought leader. If you don't have time to host a speaker this year, try interviewing one for your newsletter on a topic of interest to your ideal audience.

Support Women-Owned Businesses

Feature products or services from women-owned businesses in your store or on your website. Offer a special discount or promotion for customers who support women-owned businesses. Call attention to the women-owned businesses you work with, such as vendors and suppliers, or highlight the stories of some of your employees.

Community Partnership

Partner with a local women's shelter, non-profit organization, or educational institution to host a fundraising event or volunteer activity.

Long-term idea: sponsor a scholarship or award for female students or entrepreneurs.

Educational Content

Create blog posts, articles, or videos highlighting the achievements of women in your industry or community. Share educational resources and information about women's history and current issues on your website and social media channels.

Social Media Campaigns

Use relevant hashtags like #WomensHistoryMonth, #WomenInBusiness, and #CelebrateWomen to share stories, quotes, and images of inspiring women. Run a social media contest or giveaway that celebrates women's achievements. Feature your female staff members and their roles within the company. Ask them to tell stories of the women who inspire them.

Customer Appreciation

Highlight female customers and their achievements through social media posts or blog posts. (with customer permission, of course).

Make It Part of a Larger Conversation

Women's History Month is a way to instill appreciation for the struggles of women and their contributions to the many areas of our society—personally and professionally. But the historical tribute can also be the beginning of a larger conversation. Is equality something you want to make part of your employee culture? Do you want customers to understand that you have programs in place that help women receive equal pay to their male counterparts? How does this celebration of women tie into your culture of who you are or who you want to be?

By celebrating Women's History Month in meaningful and creative ways, you can demonstrate your commitment to gender equality, foster a positive and inclusive work environment, and strengthen your connection with your community and customers. This month isn't just about clever marketing. It could be the beginning of a much larger conversation about workforce dynamics and culture in your company and beyond.

NEWS FROM THE STATE

THE MILE MARKER

FEBRUARY 2025
SDVISIT.COM

Hello, Tourism Partners!

Greetings from Los Angeles!

As I write this quick message, Calvin Bloemendaal, our Research Manager, and I just finished the two-day Los Angeles Travel & Adventure Show at the LA Convention Center. It was an INCREDIBLE showing for The Mount Rushmore State!

The LA show had record-breaking attendance, and our booth was swamped with Southern Californians looking for adventure in our beautiful, inspiring, creative and unique state. We had dozens and dozens of folks who told us our state is definitely on their vacation bucket list. We also had SO MANY attendees stop and tell us that of all the trips they have taken in the USA, South Dakota was their very favorite. The excitement, genuineness, and sparkle in the eyes of those who shared their South Dakota vacation memories with us was nothing short of inspiring. I will be staying in Los Angeles for a few more days this week as I visit with members of the travel media as well as meet with a potential marketing partner whose event could very well put South Dakota in the spotlight in a big way in 2026. Stay tuned! Be sure and check out all kinds of great updates in the newsletter below. You'll read about Cole's recent Brand USA mission to India, Calley's work at the American Bus Association Marketplace in Philadelphia, and a deadline for completing our Destination Development Program survey (February 28). If you have questions about any of these items, please don't hesitate to reach out.

The 2025 legislative session is halfway over, and we want to take a moment to thank the Tourism Coalition of South Dakota (TCSD) for their outstanding work in keeping tabs on bills that affect the tourism industry in our state. As I shared at last month's tourism conference, we are so fortunate to have a newly revamped, dynamic, and strong advocacy arm for tourism in South Dakota that is working hard to make sure our industry's voice is heard in the halls of our state capitol. If you are not yet a member of the TCSD, please consider joining today. You can learn more about the Tourism Coalition here.

In closing, I want to share a very warm email message we received from two recent visitors to our state. It sums up so perfectly just how very special our state and its citizens are. The recent visitors wrote:

"We came to America over 50 years ago, and this trip to South Dakota felt like discovering its beauty all over again. The landscapes were incredible, but it was the warmth of the people that truly touched us. Even when we got stuck in the snow, two amazing drivers stopped to help us without hesitation. We were so grateful and moved ♥. Thank you @travelsouthdakota for an experience we'll cherish forever!"

It doesn't get much better than that!

THANK YOU, friends, for being such kind people and for taking such great care of every guest who crosses the borders of our state. Keep up the great work! We are proud of you.

All our best,

Jim and Team
