CUSTER CONNECTIONS

What Would Fall Apart If Your Best Employee Left Tomorrow?

Every business has that one employee—the person who knows how to fix the ancient printer, knows which vendor will answer after 5 p.m. and how to get them to do so, knows where the old customer files live, and understands the nuances and preferences of your most loyal customers, including what not to do when they're upset.

That employee can work through any role because they've been around long enough to know where all the bodies are buried. Figuratively, we hope.

They're invaluable and you lean on them without thinking. They're an integral part of your business and you can't imagine working without them, but they're also one of your biggest business risks.

Yes, they're a great employee, and would never knowingly leave you in a lurch, but the problem occurs when critical knowledge lives entirely in one person's head. If that employee gets another job, retires, becomes ill or is in an accident, takes an extended leave, or simply decides it's time for a change, how much of your business walks out the door with them?

For many small businesses, the answer is uncomfortable.

The “Only Sam Knows How” Problem

Large companies usually have redundancy, documented processes, training programs, and entire departments built around continuity.

Small businesses often have “Sam.” Sam knows how everything works. That arrangement feels wonderfully efficient right up until Sam is unavailable. Somehow even ChatGPT doesn't know what Sam does.

And the danger isn't limited to highly technical jobs either. Institutional knowledge can include vendor contacts, software passwords, customer preferences, renewal dates, purchasing procedures, pricing history, equipment quirks, regulatory requirements, and dozens of small decisions employees make automatically because they have made them hundreds of times before.

That knowledge has business value. If it disappears, the company may lose productivity, customers, revenue, and time while everyone else tries to reconstruct how things were done.

Even if you don't think Sam would leave without giving notice and training their replacement, there are times things happen unexpectedly, and that kind of institutional knowledge isn't even something Sam knows to impart. An employee thinks about how to train their replacement in job responsibilities. They cannot train on that special relationship they have with your top vendor and it probably won't occur to them to tell their replacement about the finicky printer and how to manage it.

Good employees should be valued precisely because of the experience and judgment they bring. But you want to ensure your business is resilient in those unexpected cases.

Start With the Jobs You Cannot Afford to Forget

Ask yourself:

If someone on our team couldn't come to work, what would we struggle to do?

Don't limit the exercise to senior employees/leadership.

Your receptionist may know more about customer behavior than anyone else in the company. Your warehouse manager may have developed an informal inventory system nobody has ever documented. Your bookkeeper may know which customers require special invoicing procedures.

Identify the processes where knowledge is concentrated in one person.

Then start documenting them.

Don't create a 200-page operations manual that nobody will read. In most situations, a checklist, shared document, short screen recording, or simple step-by-step guide is enough.

Document things such as:

- recurring tasks and deadlines
- passwords and system access procedures
- important vendor and customer contacts
- billing and purchasing procedures
- software instructions
- equipment maintenance
- regulatory or compliance responsibilities
- common problems and how they are handled

You want to create a business someone else can successfully step into.

Cross-Train Before You Need To

Documentation helps, but people learn by doing. Whenever possible, have at least one additional employee understand the basics of critical responsibilities. You don't want your company to grind to a halt because one person is unavailable or gone.

Cross-training can also reveal inefficiencies. When someone explains a process to another employee, you may discover that six steps exist simply because nobody has questioned them in eight years.

Build Your Bench Strength Before You Need It

There's another side to succession planning: knowing where to find people when you need them. Your local chamber of commerce can become an important resource for this. Chambers connect businesses with other employers, workforce organizations, colleges, training providers, staffing professionals, and community leaders. They may offer job boards, workforce programs, referrals, leadership development opportunities, networking events, or introductions that help employers expand their talent pipeline. Those relationships can make finding the right person significantly easier.

Even if you don't need someone now, get to know your community. See who's working in similar areas. Know who could become your next star. Stay connected.

But finding a strong candidate is only half the equation.

Even the perfect new employee will struggle if the person they're replacing left behind no instructions, passwords, processes, contacts, or context.

Recruitment and continuity have to work together.

Your Business Should Know What Your Employees Know

Great employees are one of a small business's greatest assets. The smartest companies don't try to reduce their importance. They capture and share enough of their knowledge so the organization can continue operating when change inevitably comes.

Think of it as protecting the investment you've made in your people.

Your chamber and local business community can help you build relationships, develop talent, and connect with potential employees when the time comes.

Your job is to make sure the next person doesn't have to solve a mystery on their first day.

Because sooner or later, every business undergoes transition. The best time to prepare for it is while Sam is still in the building.

Debunking five common Social Security myths

*Reported by Jared Slagle MBA,
Edward Jones, Member SIPC*

Social Security is often one of the most important income sources in retirement. Yet widespread myths about how it works can lead to confusion, unnecessary worry and poor planning decisions. Here's the truth behind five of the most common misconceptions.

Myth 1: Social Security is going broke.

You've probably heard this one, but the full picture is more nuanced. According to the 2026 Social Security Board of Trustees Report, if Congress does nothing, the program would need to reduce benefits starting in 2032, paying roughly 78 cents for every dollar owed.

But that's just one scenario. Congress could raise the combined payroll tax from 12.4% to 16.65%, which the trustees estimate would secure full benefits through 2100. Other options include eliminating the earnings cap subject to payroll tax or adjusting retirement ages. Lawmakers have tools to address this.

Myth 2: Social Security will cover all your retirement needs. Think of Social Security as a financial foundation, not the full building. According to the Social Security Administration, benefits replace only about 40% of pre-retirement income for a median earner. That means you'll likely need to account for most of your retirement income yourself. Building a strong personal savings strategy now can help close that gap.

Myth 3: You lose benefits permanently if you keep working. Not true. Social Security does have an "earnings test" that can temporarily reduce benefits for people who claim early and keep working. If your earnings exceed a set annual cap – which changes each year – Social Security will withhold a portion of your benefits. But once you reach full retirement age, the Social Security Administration adjusts your monthly check higher to repay those withheld amounts over time.

Myth 4: An ex-spouse's benefits come out of your own. If you were married for at least 10 years and are currently unmarried, your former spouse may be eligible to collect on your earnings record, or you may be able to collect on theirs. Divorced spouse benefits can be up to 50% of the other person's full retirement benefit. But those payments don't affect yours. Your monthly benefit is not reduced by anything paid to an ex-spouse or even a current spouse.

Myth 5: Social Security benefits are no longer taxed. Recent legislation caused some confusion here. The One Big Beautiful Bill Act did not eliminate taxes on Social Security benefits. If your combined income exceeds certain thresholds, you'll still owe taxes on a portion of your benefits.

The law also created a temporary deduction (available through 2028) for people 65 and older. Eligible taxpayers can deduct $6,000 per qualifying filer if their modified adjusted gross income is $75,000 or less for singles or $150,000 for couples. The deduction phases out at $175,000 for singles and $250,000 for joint filers.

The more you understand Social Security, the more control you have over your retirement outcome. Grounding your decisions in facts rather than assumptions can make a meaningful difference in your long-term financial security.

FREEDOM 250 AT MOUNT RUSHMORE DELIVERS MILLIONS IN ECONOMIC IMPACT AND GLOBAL EXPOSURE FOR SOUTH DAKOTA

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Mon., Aug. 10, 2026

CONTACT: Katlyn Svendsen, Global Public Relations & Content Services Senior Director, Travel South Dakota

PIERRE, S.D. – The Freedom 250 at Mount Rushmore celebration generated millions of dollars in economic activity while showcasing the state to audiences around the world.

A post-event analysis done by research firm Tourism Economics found the event generated an estimated $2.35 million in total economic impact, including nearly $1.5 million in direct visitor spending, while supporting area businesses, hotels, and local tax revenue.

More than 4,000 attendees attended the event, with 87.7% traveling from overnight destinations and representing more than 40 states.

The event's significance extended well beyond those attending in person and those that left their tax dollars in local communities. It also was viewed by millions across the world.

Broadcast and digital media coverage reached an estimated 53.7 billion audience impressions, generating an estimated $50.7 million in publicity value. Online interest also surged, with Travel South Dakota's website recording 146,535 sessions during the event period—a 66% increase over the previous week—and the livestream being viewed more than 107,000 times.

“The Freedom 250 at Mount Rushmore event demonstrated what happens when South Dakota has the opportunity to showcase one of America's most iconic landmarks on an international stage,” said James Hagen, Secretary of the South Dakota Department of Tourism. “The economic benefits to our communities, combined with the extraordinary global exposure for South Dakota, will continue to pay dividends well into the future.”

The Tourism Economics analysis also found the event immediately generated:

- $2.35 million in total economic impact.
- $1.49 million in direct visitor spending.
- More than 4,100 hotel room nights.
- More than $1 million in lodging revenue.
- Approximately $162,000 in combined state and local tax revenue.

The celebration also produced one of the strongest tourism weekends in recent Rapid City history. During the event, hotel occupancy increased 5.5% year-over-year, and Friday, July 3 recorded the highest single-day hotel revenue year-to-date as well as the top single day revenue-per-available room in the last two years.

The event was made possible through a partnership between the State of South Dakota, the U.S. Department of the Interior, the National Park Service and numerous federal, state and local partners. Following a five-year absence, the return of fireworks to Mount Rushmore National Memorial served as a centerpiece of the nation's 250th anniversary celebration.

The State of South Dakota invested $2.8 million in planning and producing the Freedom 250 at Mount Rushmore celebration. This generated a return on investment that has already paid tremendous dividends and will continue to do so for years to come, thanks to the billions of earned media impressions. The costs include the pyrotechnics and lighting, media production, shuttle bus contracts, and cost recovery payments to the National Park Service.

“This event generated an estimated $2.35 million in direct economic impact while delivering more than 53 billion media impressions globally, introducing South Dakota to new and familiar audiences,” Hagen said. “It's an investment that strengthened our tourism economy while reinforcing South Dakota's place as one of America's most iconic destinations.”

The South Dakota Department of Tourism is comprised of Travel South Dakota and the South Dakota Arts Council. The Department is led by Secretary James D. Hagen.

Safety Alert: Veteran's Point Area and Trail temporarily closed

(Rapid City, SD, August 10, 2026) — Beginning August 16, 2026, through May 20, 2027, the Veteran's Point Area and Veteran's Point Trail will be closed to public for safety due to construction associated with the Veteran's Point Trail Rehabilitation Project. This project includes asphalt and handrail repairs, construction of retaining walls, erosion control and overall trail improvements to enhance public access and safety.

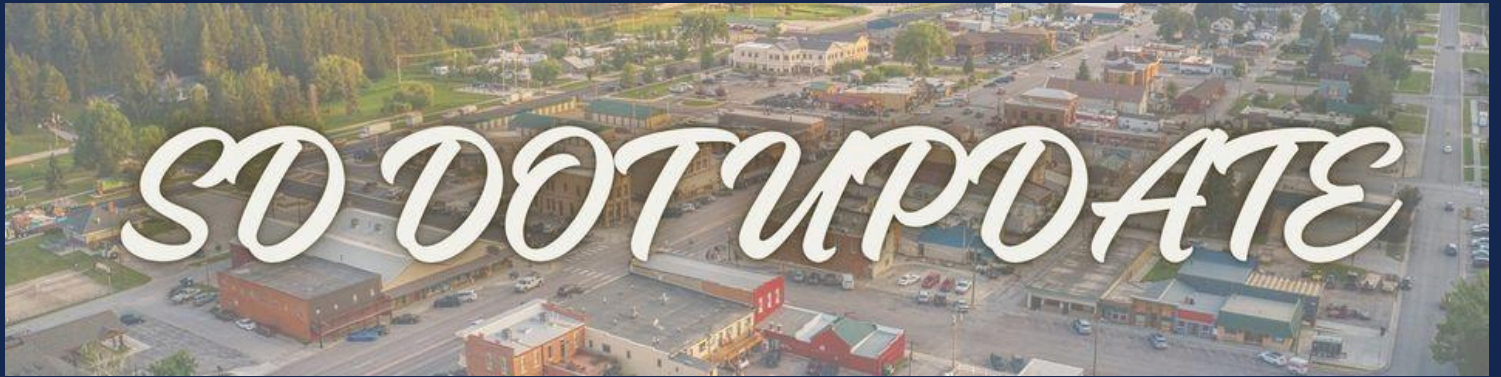

The closure is necessary due to recurring safety concerns, including the public passing barricades, entering active construction areas, damaging construction materials, blocking access with unauthorized vehicles and causing interruptions to project operations. These issues have made it unsafe for the site to remain open during construction.

The contractor began mobilization on June 11, 2026, and project completion is now anticipated by mid-May 2027.-
For more information on the Black Hills National Forest, call the Recreation Program at (605) 673-9200 or visit <https://www.fs.usda.gov/r02/blackhills>.
